Service offer

Tests of Change is a process to facilitate incremental improvement in the learning estate by developing a culture of testing to inform investment and approaches to spatial use. It is a user centric process of practice and spatial improvement derived from evidence and place based analysis to enhance teaching and learning environments.

Who is it for?

Our Tests of Change service is available to education authorities and schools in Scotland at no cost.

Format

The process involves the engagement of learners and teachers to help derive a strategic overview of spatial issues and opportunities through the following methods:

- Outcome Planning: Consultation with school leaders and teachers to establish the scope of practice change and identify issues and opportunities
- Testing Solutions: Workshop participation ('space hacks') involving learners and teachers to trial temporary spatial solutions
- Evaluating their impact: Highlighting observations and findings from the space hack to help inform investment opportunities
